

GRYMES HILL

Wagner College has been named one of America's top colleges in the Princeton Review's 2018 "Best 382 Colleges" guide. The Wagner College Theatre program was also ranked No. 4 in the nation, ahead of Muhlenberg, Sarah Lawrence, Bennington and Bard colleges, as well as Northwestern and Brown universities. Staten Island Advance photo

Wagner College named one of best schools in U.S.

Diane C. Lore lore@siadvance.com

Wagner College has been named one of America's top colleges in the Princeton Review's 2018 "Best 382 Colleges" guide.

The Wagner College Theatre program was also ranked No. 4 in the nation, ahead of Muhlenberg, Sarah Lawrence, Bennington and Bard colleges, as well as Northwestern and Brown universities.

Only about 15 percent of America's 2,500 four-year colleges are profiled in the "Best 382 Colleges" book, which is the Princeton Review's flagship college guide.

It includes detailed profiles of the colleges with rating scores for all schools in eight categories, based on the Princeton Review's surveys of students attending the colleges.

In its overall profile on Wagner College, this year's Princeton Review "Best 382 Colleges" guide quotes extensively from students surveyed for the book.

Wagner students describe the college as a "tight-knit and fun, yet academically challenging" liberal arts school.

They cited its suburban campus atop Grymes Hill and its proximity to New York City, and the school's "learn by doing" policy that gets students off campus and into the community.

'PERFECT LOCATION, UNIQUE RESOURCES'

The school is "in the perfect location with a surplus of unique resources" and is composed of "an excellent and vibrant community that supports its students every step of the way."

Students said Wagner "lets you experience all different types of subjects by following the concept: learning by doing."

Wagner's theater department has been ranked among the top five collegiate theater programs in the United States by the Princeton Review for more than a decade.

The department, created in 1968, has a long list of distinguished alumni, from Tony Award winner Randy Graff '76 to "Jersey Boys" film star Renee Marino '04.